

THE SCRANTONIAN

Carbondale

Because it is, after all, "The Pioneer City" of the region, Carbondale has an historic city building complete with clock tower. Generations of Carbondaleans grew up checking the time on the clock's four faces or hurrying to appointments after being prodded by the clock's chiming of the hour.

For many years, though, the old clock did not function. It stood, stilled, a forlorn reminder of better days.

Now, the clock is repaired, functioning again, thanks to the efforts of a restoration committee, thanks to many people, including former Carbondaleans, who cared enough to contribute $3,500 to fix the clock.
